

Implement turning mapping constraints on and off

When editing several tables in a database, it's sometimes very convenient to turn off the constraints while editing.

They're checked when I turn them on or commit changes.

Similar I would like Powercenter to turn off arrow consistency checking while editing.

In that way it will be much easier to do things like removal of active transformations or changing source tables.